

Which is the most important for teachers –

1. Give students advice to plan for their future
2. The ability to find students that need help and provide them with this support
3. The ability to encourage students to learn by themselves outside the classroom

Being a positive influence on the young minds who will become the future leader within our society is a big responsibility. In this vein, one of the primary role models for students is found within the confines of our educational institutions, namely teachers. Those who carry the important task of educating out young. When we think of teachers, we immediately create a picture in our minds of those in society whose job it is to impart knowledge, though their influence is a lot broader than that. They also give career advice, work with struggling students and encourage autonomous learning.

(In paragraph 2, talk about one option that you don't select, however say it is good, but has drawbacks)

Previously teacher's advice on future job opportunities was respected and often followed, though many of the jobs available did not exist 5 years ago, and that speed of transition is likely to keep going into the future. To push students down a particular track is wrong. It is better to give them the information and knowledge necessary to make an informed decision independently. It is only the students themselves. That can know their true heart.

(3) Another option that you think is ok, though it still isn't the optimal choice....

(4) By far the best option is ..... because....
